The Arpillera Sewing Project consists of groups of women in the shanty towns, located in the desert hills on the outskirts of Lima, who gather together to work on sewing projects and improve their sewing skills, then continue working at home. 75% of heads of households are underemployed; the majority making a living from informal trades in construction work as masons or assistants. Their average monthly income range is less than the equivalent of $150 (£100) /month. The women have become good friends and discuss their problems and pray together at the weekly meetings. The Arpilleras they create depict scenes of both country life and city life in Perú, and also biblical events, such as Noah's Ark or Jesus' birth and the visit of the 3 wise men. The work is very detail-oriented and requires advanced skills. A member of the English-speaking congregation from the Diocese of Peru, Jean Samaniego, leads this group of women and works closely with the priest of the mission church in the shanty town. The revenues generated from the sale of these products help reinforce the women's family budget. The money raised through the sale of Arpillera articles goes directly back to the ladies who sew the articles. They are required to use the money for the betterment of themselves and their household. For example, the income may be used to take a class in sewing, or build an extra room onto their house in order to host an Arpillera group, or pay school expenses, or send their child to a better school or to be educated in a trade.

Any profit made on the UK sales, together with donations in lieu of speaker fees goes to the project in Lima for our Church to use to further help these poor families.

Nick and Chris are available to give talks with slides, music and film and show examples – please email / call to check availability / book.
